6. “An ‘I’ is needed to live, not a robot”

The struggles we encounter on our journey are not measures of our inadequacy, they are what force us to give reasons for what we do. Otherwise, “If you do not have an affection for yourselves, a passion for your destiny, a passion for your own happiness, what is the point? No one can make you do anything. [...] And when you desire to live according to these needs, start to ask yourself: “Where can I find people who want to go where I want to go? [...] Where do I see people who are entirely engaged in what they are doing? Who find joy in what they do, and are not oppressed by it?” We suggest working on pages 7-8 of Notes from the GS Raggio via video link with Julián Carrón and Francesco Barberis. We should re-read the text, consider our experience, and let ourselves be challenged by these questions.
